Introduction

The following photos show a snap shot of the development of houses, plots and street in Oosterwold during the year 2019. The organic urban development caters a high diversity of typologies – from catalogue housing to yurts – a high diversity of development stages – from the early stages of construction to fully finished streets – and a diversity of scales – from a single tiny home to a community of villas. This diversity makes it difficult to characterize Oosterwold. As was mentioned in the introduction, no one agrees on whether it is just another sub-urb of Almere, a slum, a sustainable utopia or simply all of the above. In this small collection of selected photos from site visits, this diversity is captured drawing you, the observer, into the discussion. Have fun exploring the many colors and faces of Oosterwold.
