100%

The Communist Party of Cuba is the only party represented in the National Assembly and was founded by the revolutionaries who overthrew the dictatorship in 1959. Ever since, the Castro family rules the country.

LAOS

132/149

89%

The Revolutionary People's Party of Laos is the only legal party since 1975, was elected democraticly and was inspired by the Communist Party of Vietnam.

VIETNAM

475/496

96%

The Communist Party of Vietnam has its supremacy guaranteed by the constitution and defends a "socialist-oriented market economy", that started in 1976.

NORTH KOREA

607/687

88%

The Worker's Party is recognized by the constitution as the leading party and has a coalition with the other 2 major parties. The same family has held power since 1948.

CHINA

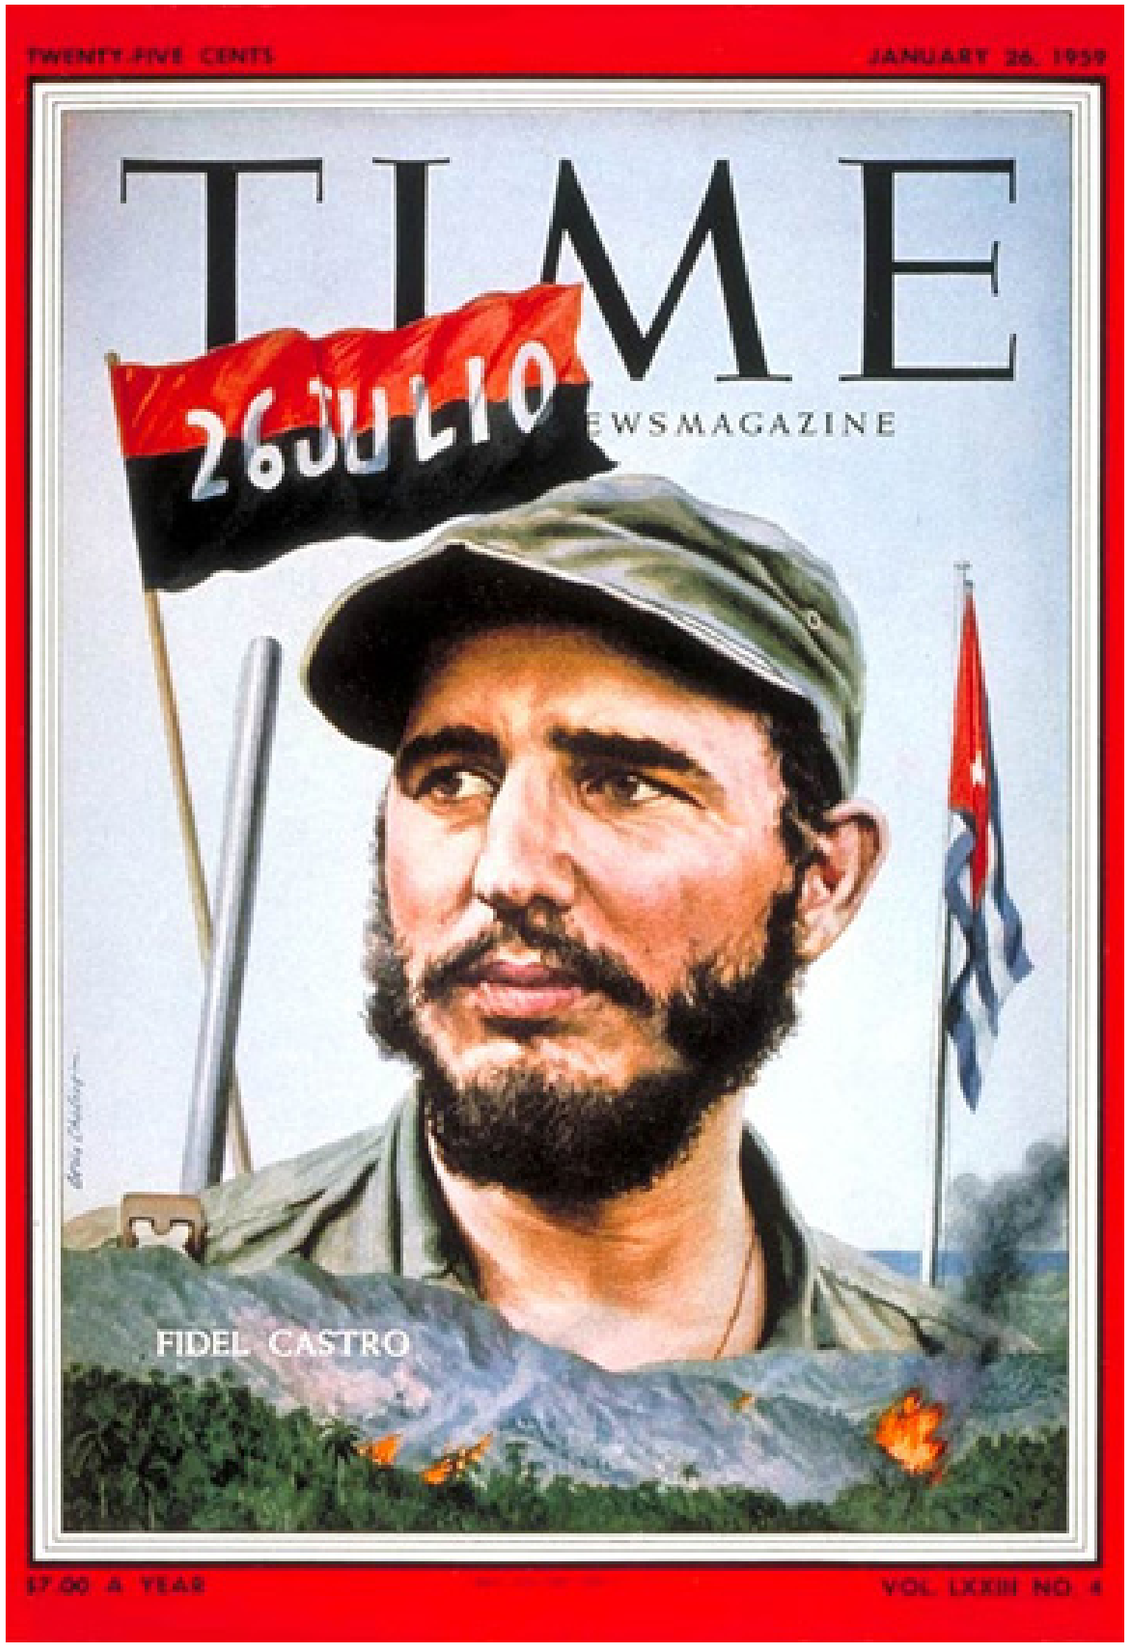

2157/2987

72%

The largest parliament in the world is leaded by the Communist Party of China, since 1949. Although another party exists, it is controled by the CPC. The County's political ideology is that of a"socialist market economy" and has been thriving for the last decades.

Cuba for sale: 'Havana is now the big cake – and everyone is trying to get a slice'

All eyes are focused on bay of Havana itself, once the source of the city's immense wealth and now the place from which investors are hoping to extract an even bigger bounty. With the opening of a new $900m port 30 miles west of Havana at Mariel – built with Brazilian help – the old harbour now represents the next major development opportunity: a derelict jumble of warehouses and struggling fragments of industry.

"The harbour is the embryo of the city," says José Antonio Choy Lopez, a Cuban architect who sits on the board of UNIAC, the Union of Cuban Writers and Artists: a body charged with assessing plans for the bay. As one of the best natural harbours in the Americas, enhanced by impressive fortifications in the 16th century, it was where the Spanish galleons assembled, laden with riches plundered from the New World, before sailing in protected convoys back to Europe. Huge quantities of gold and silver, along with Alpaca from the Andes, emeralds from Colombia and mahogany from Guatemala, were all traded here, bringing profits that are wrought in Havana's palatial buildings. "It was a cultural crossroads, the very reason for the cosmopolitan character of the city," says Choy. "And its redevelopment is now the most important project facing Cuba this century."
