Citizenship for sale, , no personal taxes, deregulation bank licenses - Nauru offers passports to foreign nationals for a fee (form 1998 to 2002 passports sales yielded $11m or about 8% of the island’s annual GDP). The inter-governmental Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering (FATF) identified Nauru as one of ‘non-cooperative’ countries in its fight against money laundering. During the 1990s, it was possible to establish a licensed bank in Nauru for only $25,000 with no other requirements. In 1999, according to US treasury, Nauru registered at least 400 offshore banks (about half of them owned by Russians) .Under pressure from FATF, Nauru introduced anti-avoidance legislation in 2003, after which foreign hot money left the country. From 2001 to 2007, the Nauru detention centre provided a significant source of income for the country. The Nauruan authorities reacted with concern to its closure by Australia. The detention centre was re-opened in August 2012. There are no personal taxes in Nauru. The unemployment rate is estimated to be 90%, and of those who have jobs, the government employs 95%

Deregulation of environmental laws, low income tax, capital gains tax, or corporation tax - According to the United Nations, Malaysia's deforestation rate is the highest among tropical nations. Widespread urbanisation, agricultural fires and forest conversion for oil palm plantations and other forms of agriculture are the main causes of Malaysia's high deforestation rate. In 2000, Malaysia was ranked fourth in the world in terms of per capita greenhouse gas emissions. The Finance Ministry designed the regulations to benefit multinational investors' legislation was kept to a minimum to allow Labuan to compete with well established offshore centres. The Trust Companies Act of 1990 prohibits officers of trust companies from disclosing the existence of trusts or the identity of settlors, appointees or beneficiaries. Labuan also has an attractive tax regime, especially for people who are investing in Malaysia's fast-growing manufacturing sector, with special allowances on investment tax. Offshore companies pay a minimum three per cent tax a year, or M$20,000 tax, or a fee of M$20,000 to the Registrar of Companies.

No gambling or corporation taxes - based in one of the Channel Islands, Alderney provides hosting to hundreds of eGaming companies. Through the data center C5's server in the neighboring Channel Island Guernsey, Alderney transmits more Internet e-gambling traffic than any other location on the globe. Its business is much larger than the combined activity of its three offshore rivals Gibraltar, the Isle of Man and Malta. For gambling groups, the principal attraction of Alderney is that there are no gambling or corporation taxes. One of the companies that was based in Alderney is the infamous Full Tilt Poker, accused by the U.S. Justice Department of defrauding online poker players out of more than $300 million in 2011.

Deregulation for oil drilling licenses - When oil deposits were detected in the '90s, Sao Tome, heavily in debt and reliant on donors to fund most of its $30m budget, was desperate for cash, it granted exclusive rights for forigen companies to market and exploit all of islands's oil reserves for the next 25 year only for $5m. The government also intended to sell exploration rights in its exclusive territorial waters since 2009. There is a free trade zone in Principe that offers tax advantages and a more political stable environment then other places in West Africa.

Deregulation of telecommunications and on-line sex - While many countries censor online sex, a number of small countries, including Guyana in Latin America and the small islands of Niue and Tuvalu in the Pacific, have leased their codes and numbers in bulk to specialized sex firms. 20 precents of Tuvalu’s government renenues are from such deals. Tuvalu has discovered, control over an internet domain name (.tv), which then can be parceled out and sold off. In 1999, Tuvalu negotiated a contract leasing its Internet domain name ‘.tv’ to a company formed by idealab for $50 million in royalties over a 12-year period. The Tuvalu government receives a quarterly payment of US$1 million for use of the top-level domain.
