HUISJE, BOOMPJE, BEESTJE

THE DUTCH LIVING CULTURE

In the Netherlands we have got the phrase: huisje, boompje, beestje. This represents a sort of life goal people have after a busy, wild student or travel lifestyle. They now want to settle and have a home (huisje), a garden (boompje) and a pet or children (beestje). For many people in Holland a single-family home with a garden is part of this social success image.

GROWING INTEREST OF THE YOUNG URBAN FAMILY

COMPLEX WITH A LOT OF DIFFERENCES

This group is nevertheless quite complex. The type of the urban family can differ based on characteristics such as the income, the nationality, the composition of the household and the age of children.

YOUNG URBAN FAMILY

MIGRANT FAMILIES

Immigrant families belonging to the lower socio-economic classes

EXPATS

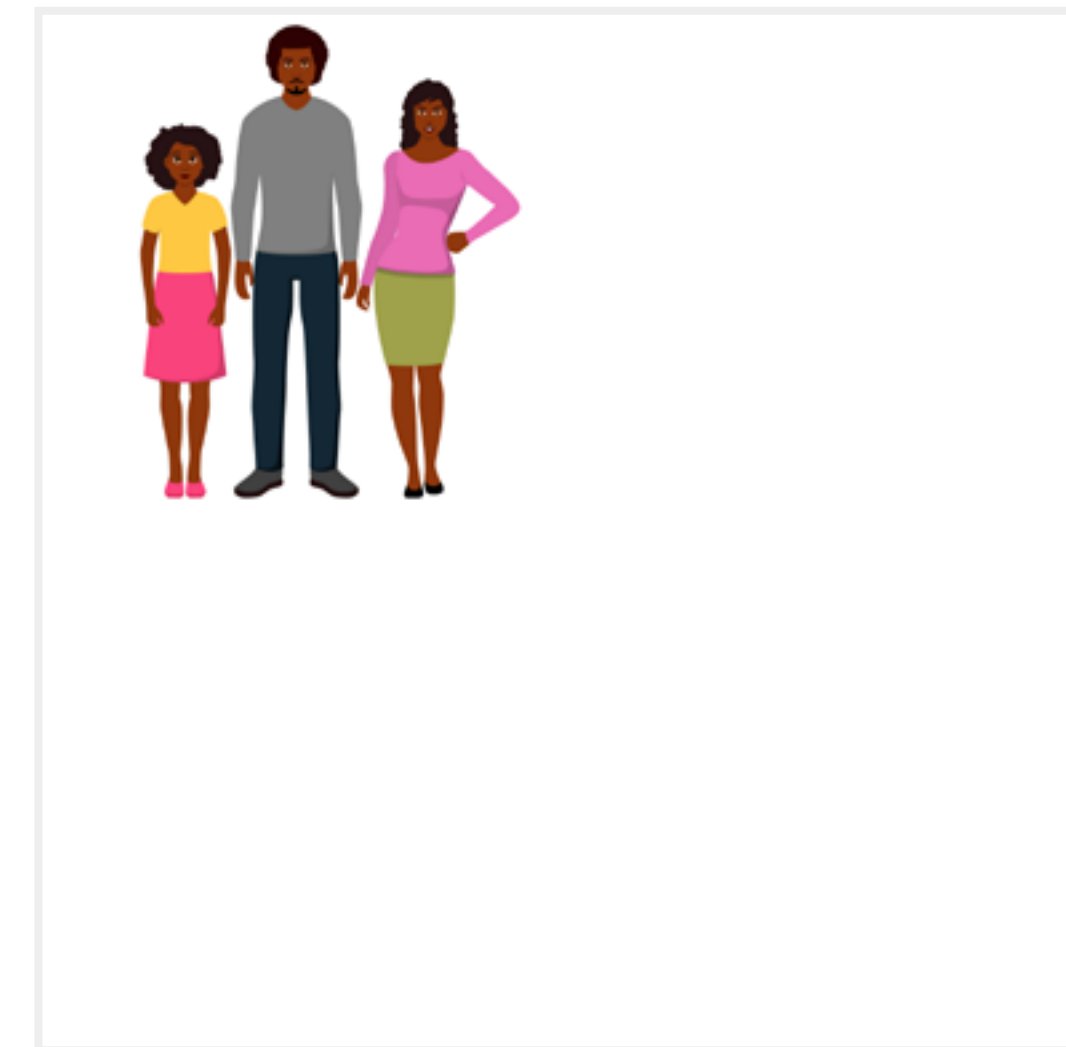

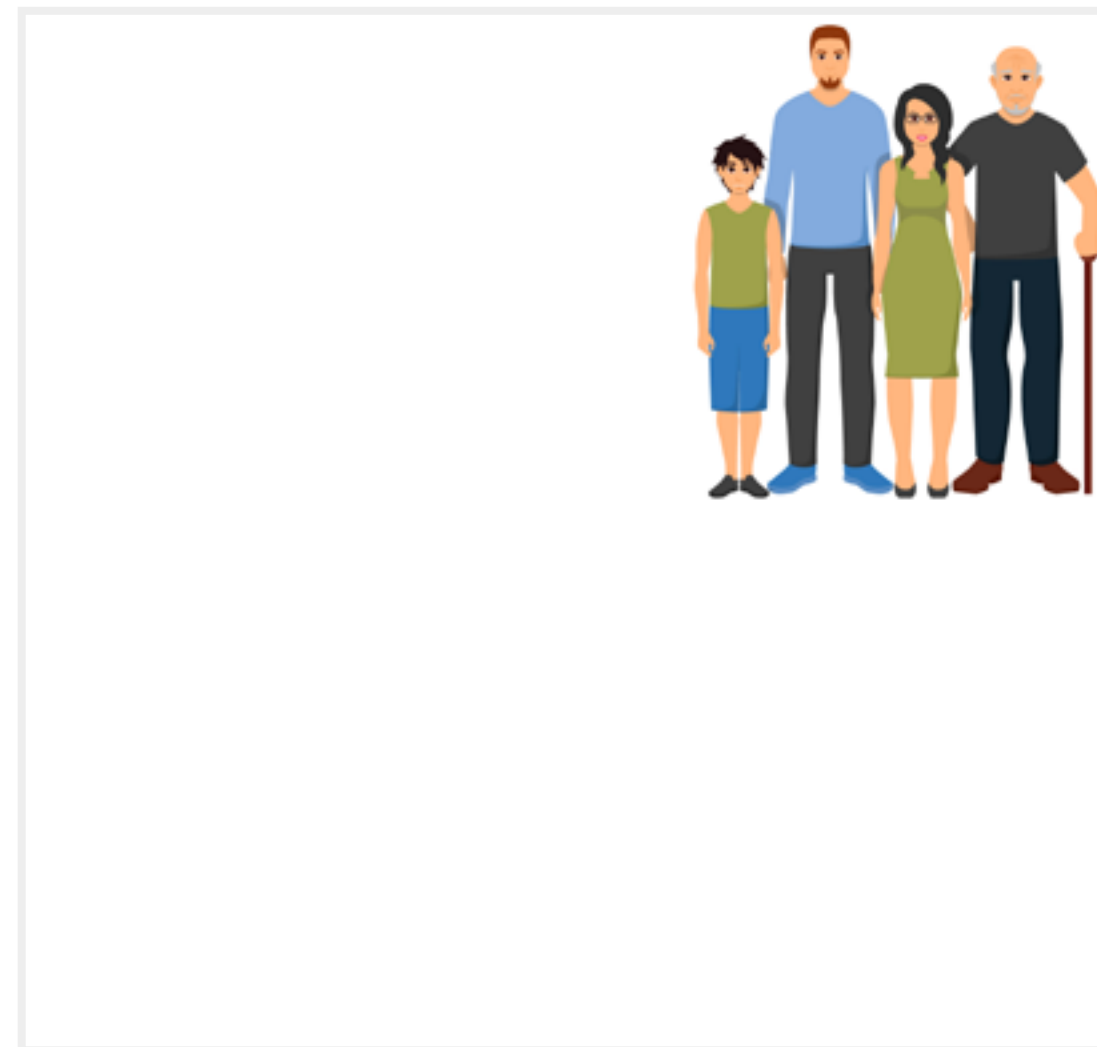

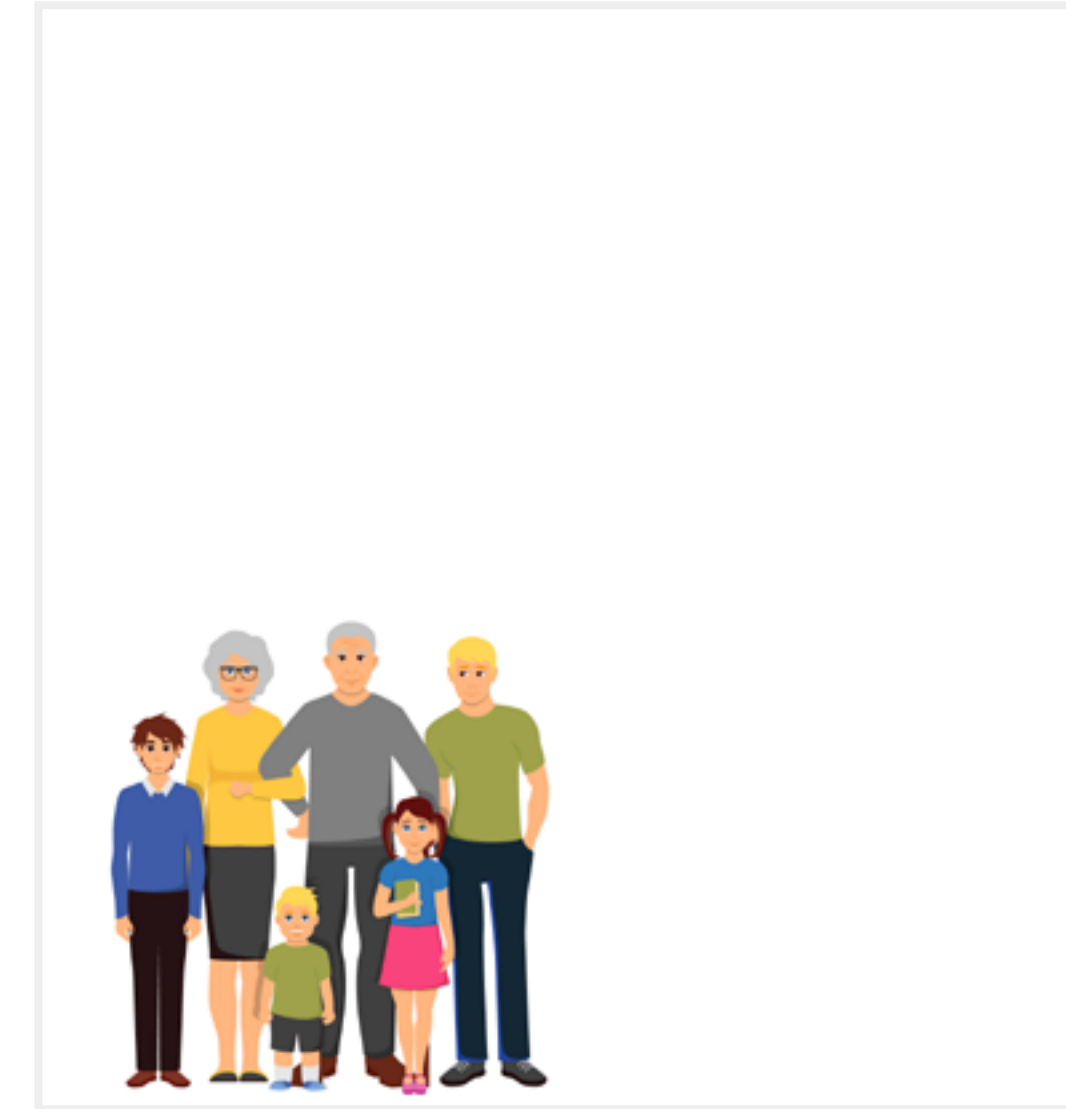

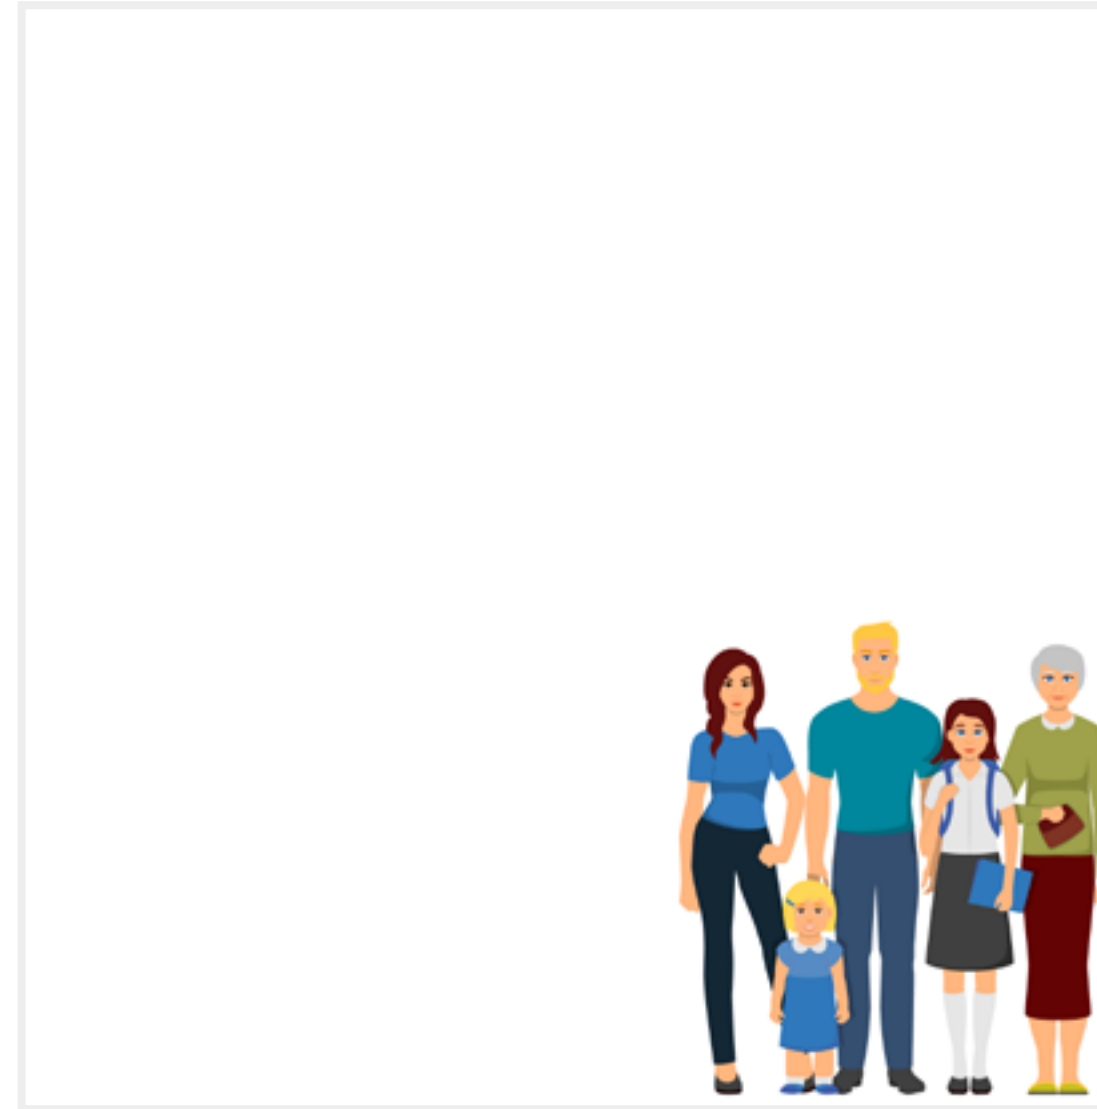

Immigrant families belonging to the middle- and upper class households

WORKING-CLASS FAMILIES

Native Dutch families belonging to the lower socio-economic classes

YUPPS

Young Urban Professionals who are having children and are therefore becoming Young Urban Professionals Parents

YOUNG URBAN FAMILY

COMPLEX FAMILIES

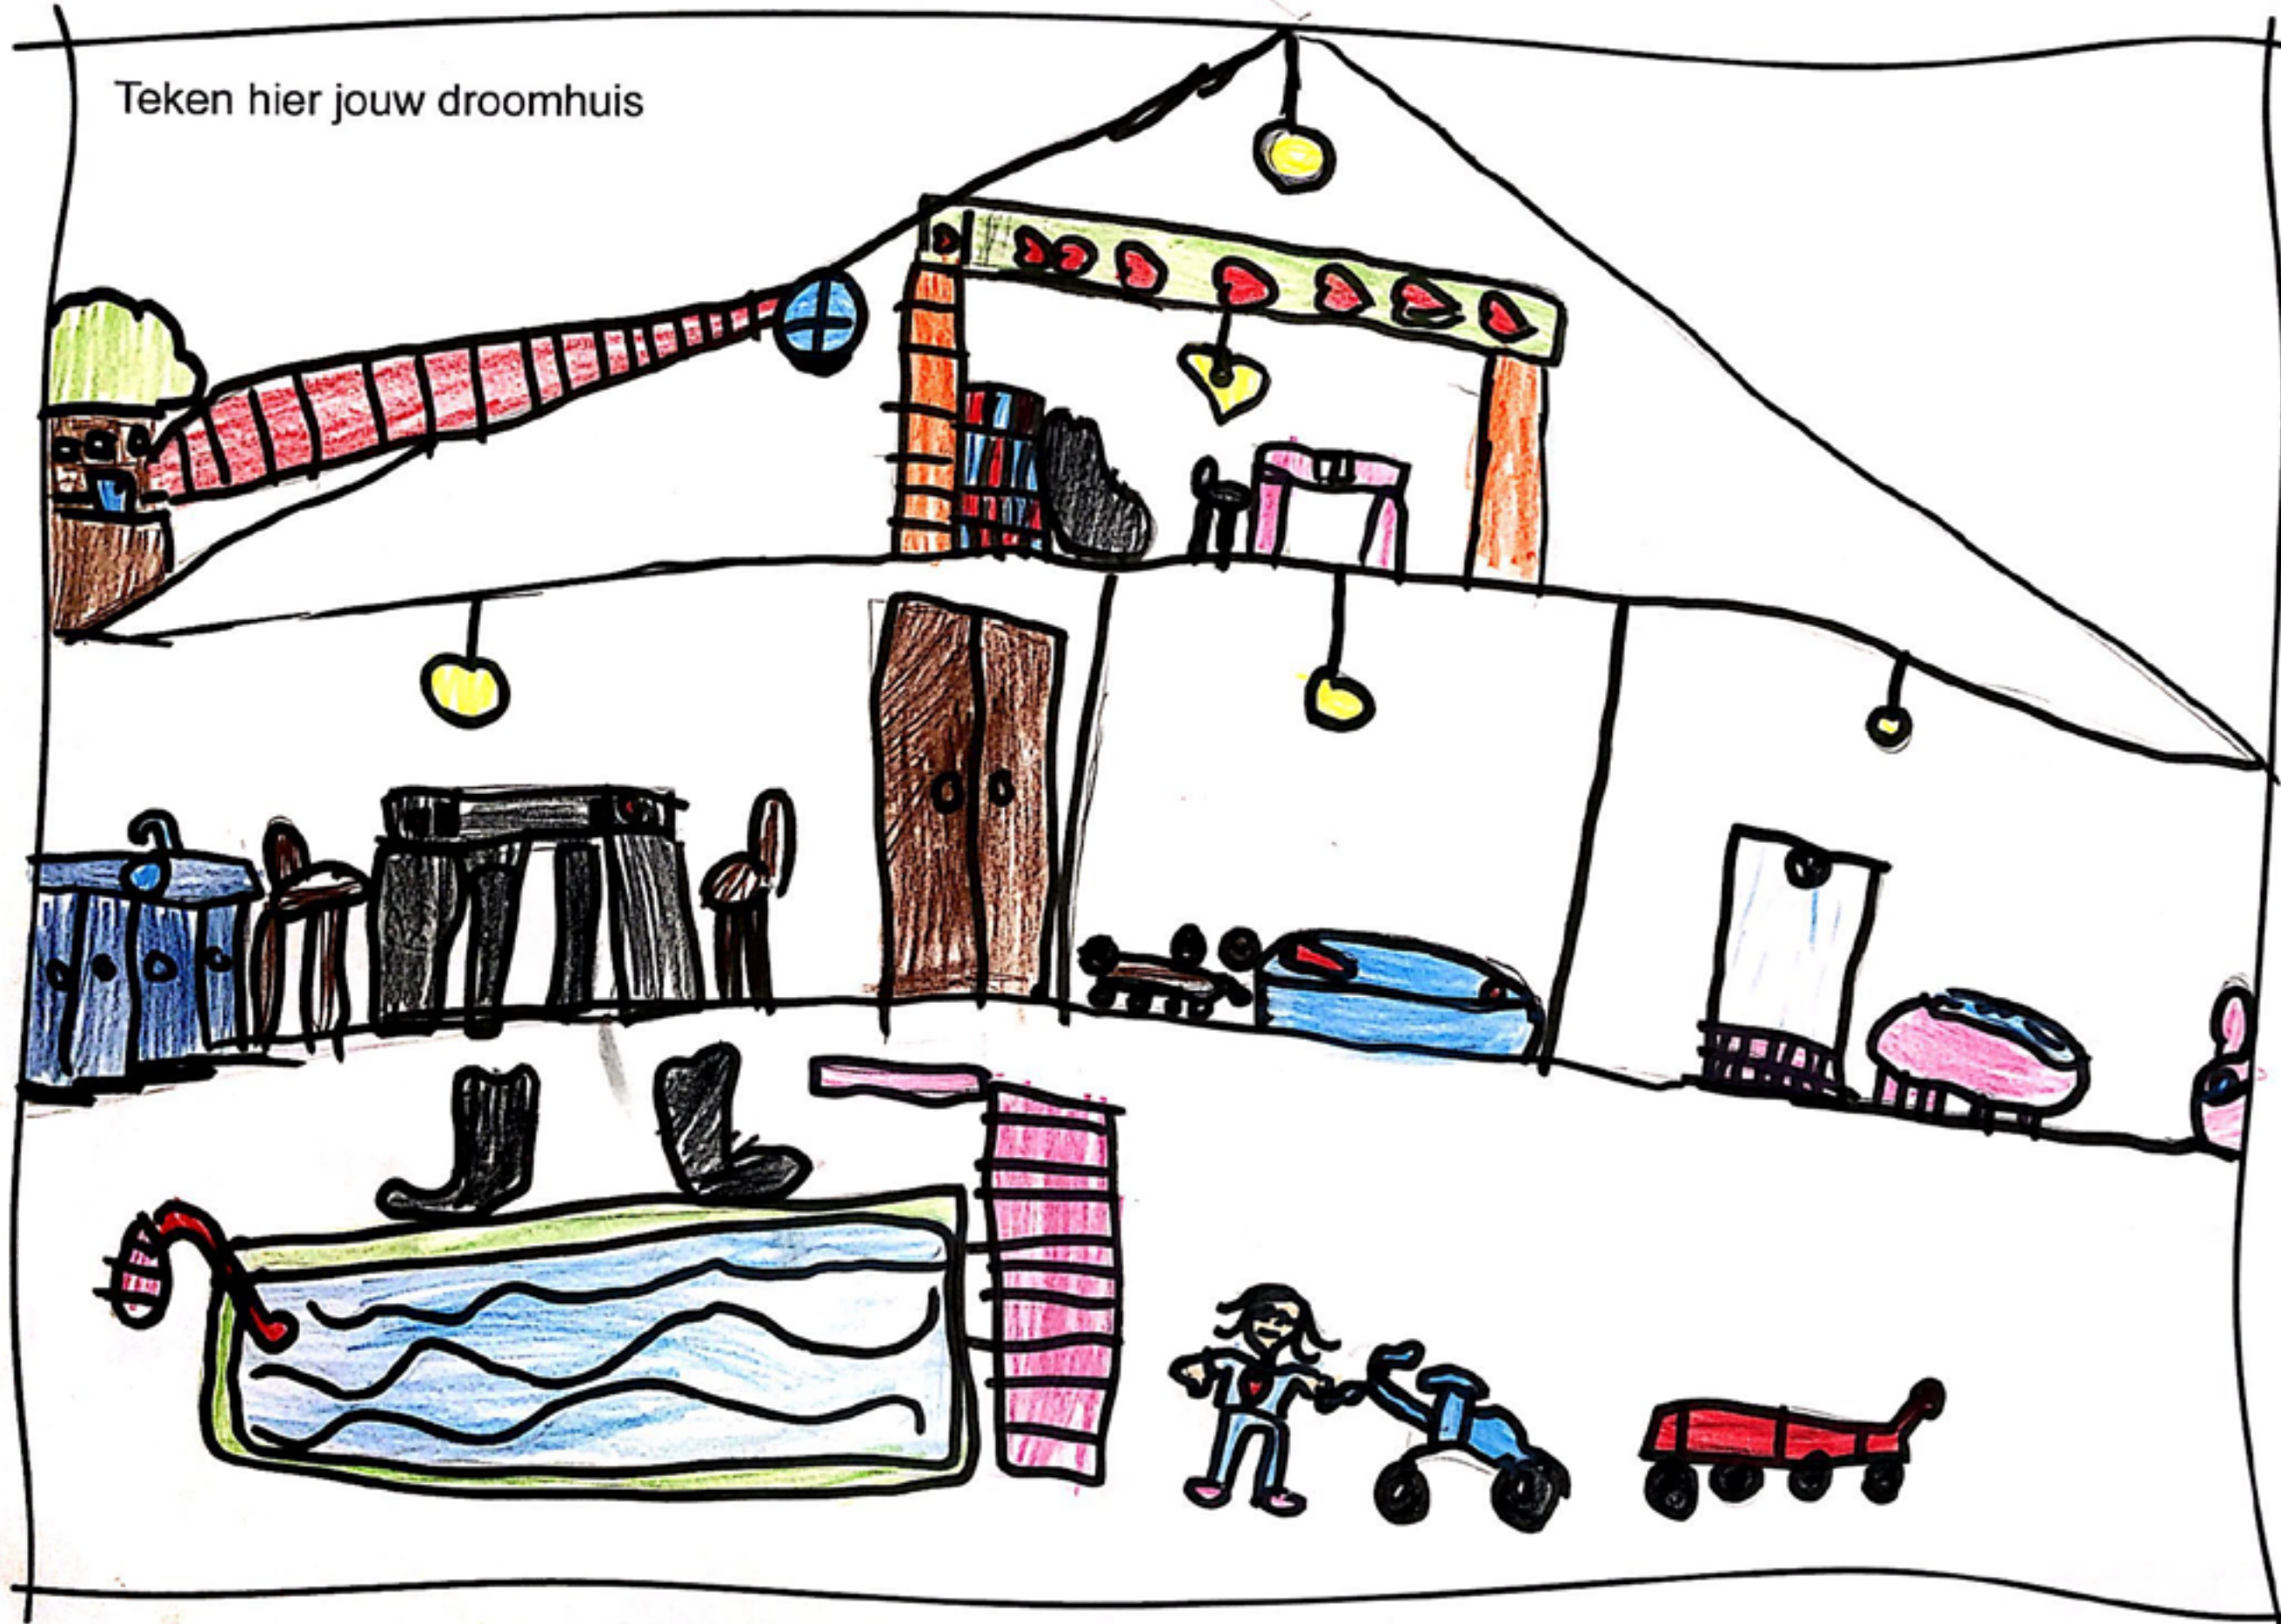

Within these four categories there are even more differences. This is partly caused by the wide diversity of the household composition. Nowadays more and more parents divorce. An emerging trend is that this new partner now also has children. Children therefore are having nowadays more step siblings.

'KINDEREN ALS CEMENT VOOR DE STAD'

LIA KARSTEN (1955, DE WEERE),
PRESIDENT CHILD IN THE CITY.

NRC HANDELSBLAD, 21 SEPTEMBER 2020

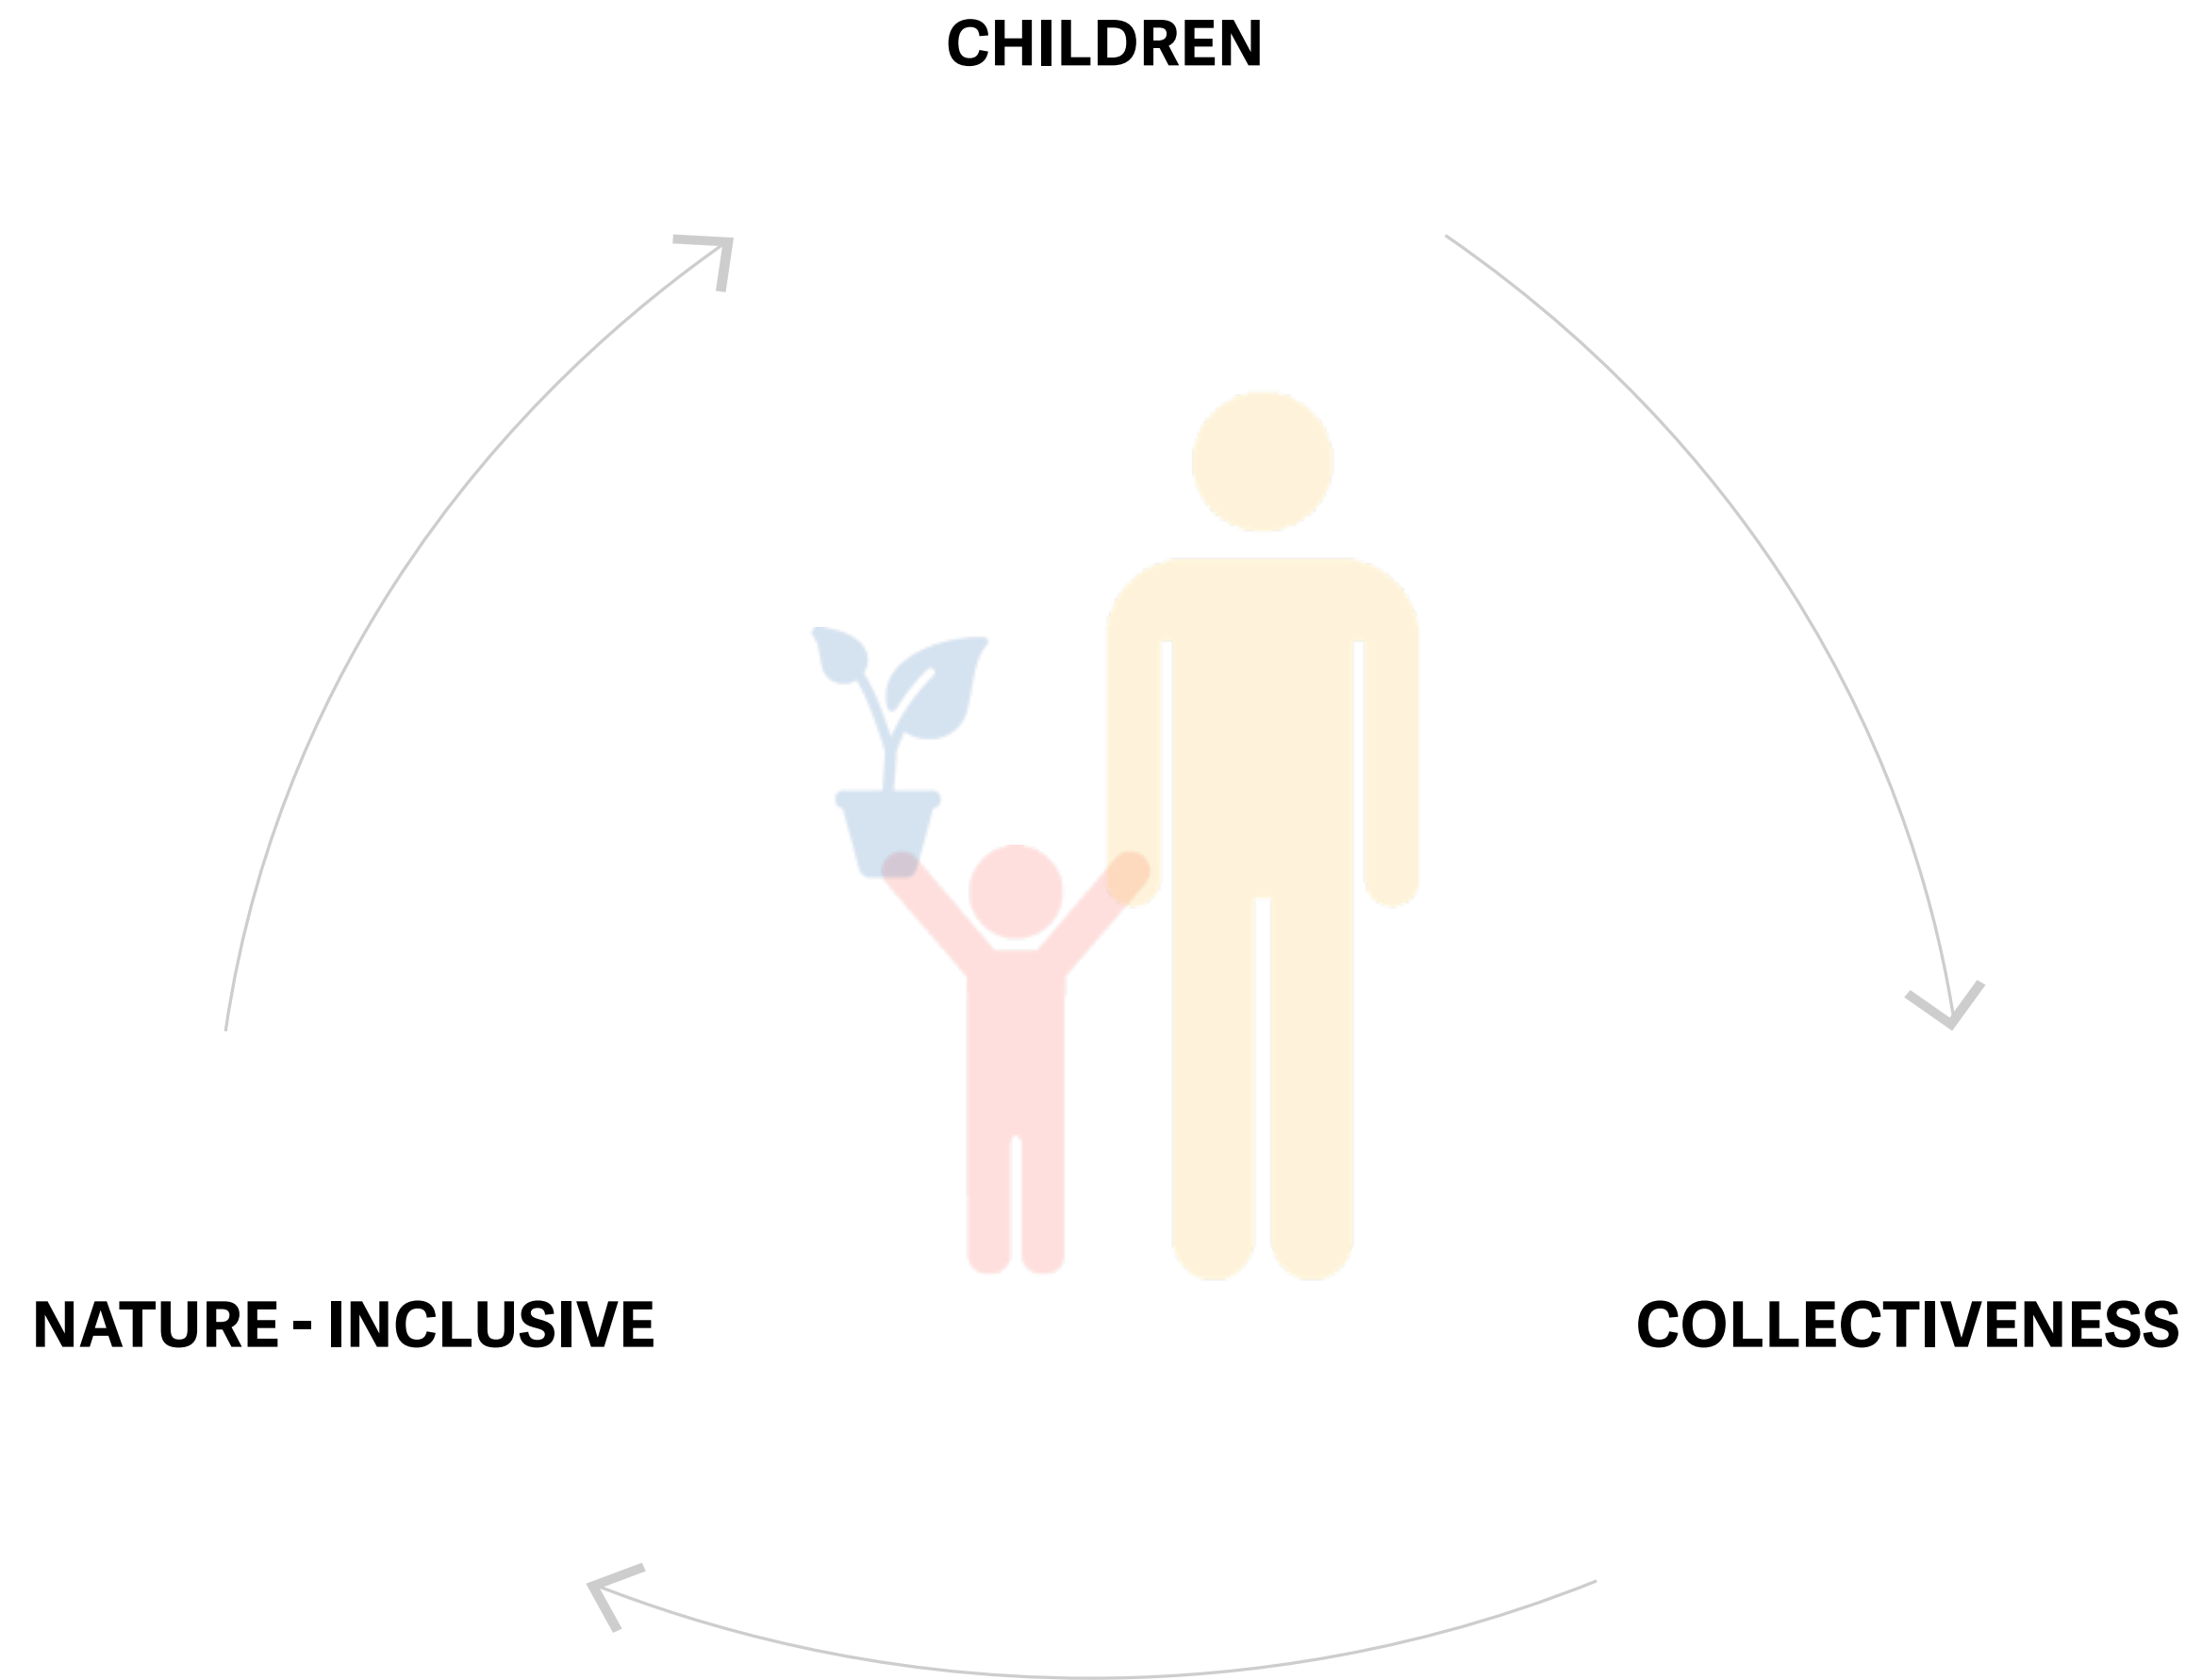

„Samen met hun kinderen zijn zij het cement van de stad. De kunst voor de stad is om plekken te creëren waar gezinnen uit verschillende sociale klassen met elkaar in contact komen.“
Sinds 1970 neemt de diversiteit in Nederlandse steden toe. „De stad heeft nog nooit zo’n diverse groep kinderen gehad als nu, qua klasse en etniciteit. Daar liggen kansen.“

'ACHTERBANKGENERATIE'

LIA KARSTEN (1955, DE WEERE),
PRESIDENT CHILD IN THE CITY.

NRC HANDELSBLAD, 21 SEPTEMBER 2020

Er is nog één ding waar ze zich zorgen over maakt, mailt ze na het gesprek. De zelfstandige bewegingsvrijheid van kinderen is sterk afgenomen. Ouders halen en brengen ze naar school en van en naar sport, muziekles en speelafspraken. De 'achterbankgeneratie' is een term die zij ervoor bedacht. Stadskinderen spelen steeds minder buiten, omdat ouders voorzichtiger zijn geworden, maar ook doordat het verkeer steeds drukker wordt en de publieke ruimte steeds voller (met terrassen, afvalbakken, Biro's, bakfietsen en oplaadpunten voor elektrische auto's). Dus ouders moeten mee naar de speeltuin. „Maar daar hebben zij niet altijd zin in, of tijd voor.” En dan blijven de kinderen dus binnen
