

An architectural rendering of a proposed urban intervention in the Blokhuispoort area. The scene features a canal in the foreground with a small boat. A tall, slender, grey concrete pillar stands on the left. In the background, traditional Dutch brick houses line the canal. To the right, a large, modern building with a complex, angular, and translucent facade is integrated into the existing urban fabric. A green lawn area in front of this building is populated with people sitting and lying down, suggesting a public space. The sky is a pale, overcast blue.
