‘Als ik naar een ander buurthuis ga, dan voel ik mij een beetje verlegen. Ik durf niet iets van water te pakken. Maar in het buurthuis naast mijn huis voel ik mij ook een beetje thuis. Ik kan daar zelf koffie pakken, dan mag ik het ook zelf afwassen.’

‘Wie is er thuis? Familie, vader en moeder met kinderen die altijd voor elkaar zorgen. Dat is het kleine huis. Maar ook in het grote thuis voel je je veilig buiten. [...] Een keer kwam mijn broer naar mij toe. De buren kenden mijn broer nog niet. Een van mijn kinderen gaat rennen naar mijn broer. Mijn broer heeft de deur van de auto voor hem geopend en mijn kind gaat in de auto. Een van de buurvrouwen gaat naar mij schreeuwen en gaat naar mijn broer. Ik: ‘o nee, geen probleem.’ Ze denk dat iemand mijn kinderen wilt stelen. Dan voel je je toch thuis?’

‘I'm an introvert I want to live alone. [...] My dream wife is someone next to my door. I have an emotional connection with her. This is what I like. Not living with me. Living beside me. [...] But the more windows that I have, the more I feel like it's home. Because I can see outside, I can have curtains, I can close them, but I can open them. I want to see outside. It's keeping yourself interacting with something not, you know, unpredictable things.’
