From the analysis starting point are formulated. These point resulted in the current design. In this design the multifunctional character of the function is clearly visible. With the addition of 2 more volumes the building becomes big enough and the differentiation of function is even more emphasized. These volumes give the building at the same time a more human scale.

On the inside of the building all the different spaces are in open connection, by playing with dimensions, height and view there is a clear distinction between the spaces. For the future of this design the main hall and the connection between the floors needs to be further investigated to give a even better answer to the question:

How can the High Voltage Laboratory be transformed in to a modern Media Centre in such a way it keeps its historical value and at the same time strengthen the relation between the industrial enclaves from the 30's and 40's on the regenerated Den Brink area?
